About NAGW

The organization's roots date back to 2003, when the Kansas City Metro Area Government Webmasters (MAGWeb) organized its first conference for web professionals, drawing over 200 attendees from 29 states.

After three wildly successful annual conferences, MAGWeb realized its brainchild was developing into something much greater than anticipated.

In January 2006, the National Association of Government Webmasters (NAGW) was born.

Currently, NAGW has over 260 members in 44 states. In addition to our National Conference, we offer vendor discounts, awards competitions, webinars, and much more.

Why NAGW?

Part of Something Great

As a NAGW member, you can be proud of your affiliation with the country's premier organization for public sector web professionals.

Networking

Through the annual conference and the NAGW listserv, you will have the opportunity to meet other web professionals experiencing many of the same issues — building important connections to more efficiently do your job.

You will also get the chance to interface with professional web services companies that can help you get the most out of your site.

Resources

You will receive access to an ever-expanding knowledgebase created by NAGW listserv members, informational documents, case studies and more.

Webinars

Members enjoy free access to regularly scheduled webinars on a variety of topics by leading experts and fellow government webmasters.

Discounts

In addition to reduced fees on registration for annual and regional conferences, you will be part of a larger organization, able to arrange for services and educational opportunities for its members at a reduced rate.
